

EXPERIENCE AFRICA IN STYLE

New group travel company TAKE METO AFRICA unites affordable luxury with authentic African adventures

If Africa is on your 2019 holiday bucket list but you don't want to break the bank, then why not join a small group travel trip with Take Me To Africa.

The company, which launched last year, will be exhibiting at the Adventure Travel Show later this month. Take Me to Africa offers an unbeatable introduction to the continent. Its extravagant 15-day Ultimate African Taster group tour spans Zimbabwe, Zambia, Botswana and South Africa, with a great balance of scenery, safari and city.

The tour begins at the magnificent Victoria Falls (on the border of Zimbabwe and Zambia) and Botswana's Chobe National Park, home to Africa's largest elephant population. After a few days you then fly to South Africa to explore The Greater Kruger and the Panorama route, with highlights including the legendary Kruger National Park and a trip to a luxury private reserve complete with open vehicles, dirt roads and a tracker/ranger duo.

Following an adrenalin-filled safari, a couple of nights in the beautiful wine region of Stellenbosch is the perfect spot to relax and unwind. The final stop on the tour is the bustling city of Cape Town, with three days to explore the Victoria & Alfred Waterfront and the surrounding sights on the way to Cape Point.

The itinerary has been expertly designed to ensure travellers see the best of Africa in the time they have there, connecting with like-minded people and locals, as well as reconnecting with themselves. Accommodation includes unique 4- and 5-star boutique hotels and lodges.

Prices for the Ultimate African Taster tour start at £3750 per person (excluding flights), based on two sharing and no single supplements, with departures between February and April 2019 allowing guests to visit each destination at the best time. Also available are tours showcasing the Wonders of South Africa and the Magical Migration & Beach which ventures across Kenya and Tanzania (www.takemetoafrica.co.uk).

Tour groups are divided into ages 30-50 and 50+ and limited to 8-12 people, ensuring people don't just get along, they make friendships that last well beyond the end of the trip.

The founder of Take Me To Africa, Sam Sellers (aka Safari Sam) has been travelling to Africa for the past 25 years, having spent her early years living in Phalaborwa, a small bush town on the edge of Kruger Park. After 15 years on the corporate ladder, she turned her back on London city life to share her passion for Africa with the wider world.

"Africa burrows into your soul and changes the way you see things..." says Sam. "I want people to experience the Africa I love with the friends they haven't met yet, with the best itineraries, good food and great accommodation – at a price that won't completely break the bank!"

About Take Me To Africa

Take Me To Africa is a uniquely African focused group tour company for the champagne backpackers of the world who want to balance travelling in style with value for money. Founded in 2018 by Sam Sellers, the company was built on a passion for Africa and a desire to create epic adventures across Africa with all the fun and comradery of group travel, but without any of the compromise.

www.takemetoafrica.com

Visit Take Me to Africa at the Adventure Travel Show, Olympia London, 19-20 January. Stand number: A4